

LAZY SPARKLES of the jewel mirror samadhi

Lazy sparkles (also known as other asterisks) are small (4cm/1.5”) circular mirrors, installed on trees at a height as high as I can reach.

They are placed one per hour over the course of a daylong walking.

Lazy sparkles cannot be acquired as such; rather, to purchase them is to encourage walking – to abet their installation along walking routes. Which is to say that lazy sparkles are available for non-profitable investment, in multiples of seven (i.e., per day).

While the pledge amount per sparkle is at the sponsor’s discretion, a suggested calculation is your pre-tax annual income divided by 2000, or a sum equal to your hourly wage.

50% of the expense will be donated for land preservation.
A particular land trust may be specified if desired.

The site of the walking may be specified if desired. If long-distance transportation is required in order to reach the walking site, then a minimum of thirty-five sparkles must be purchased, and travel expenses provided.

Installation of your lazy sparkles will be soon after receipt of payment, unless otherwise agreed upon, or if the given site is distant from my then-present location. They are fastened with aluminum nails with space allowed for tree growth (standard practice for long-term tree identification tags in arboretums).

You will receive a certificate of authenticity specifying the quantity and whereabouts of your lazy sparkles.

Lazy sparkles may be dedicated as a gift.
